Kentucky Hunger Dialogue

November 12, 2026 - Morehead, Kentucky

The Kentucky Hunger Dialogue brings together college students, faculty, staff, and community partners from across the Commonwealth to connect, share ideas, and take action around food insecurity. This one-day event creates space to learn from one another, highlight innovative programs and projects, and build partnerships that strengthen efforts to address hunger across Kentucky.

KHD FELLOW SPOTLIGHT

Cèline Gibson

Cèline Gibson, Kentucky Hunger Dialogue Senior Fellow from Madisonville Community College, focused her fellowship project on understanding student food insecurity and awareness of the MCC Food Pantry. Through surveys, interviews, and campus outreach, she identified barriers such as lack of awareness and stigma and explored ways to better connect students with available resources. Her project gave her the opportunity to engage directly with students and turn what she learned through research into meaningful action on campus.

BECOME A KENTUCKY HUNGER DIALOGUE FELLOW

Are you a college student interested in food insecurity, food justice, community engagement, or making a difference on your campus? The Kentucky Hunger Dialogue Fellowship is a 12-week experience designed to help students turn their interests into action. Throughout the fellowship, students will complete Canvas-based learning activities, explore topics related to hunger and food insecurity, connect with other students and professionals, and build their leadership skills. During the 12 weeks, each Fellow will also develop a project designed to address a need or opportunity on their campus or in their community, creating something they can put into action beyond the fellowship.
